

Pressed to Express

At Eternal Summer of the Black Feminist Mind we believe that education is eternal when it is accountable to communities and community supported. We ask that each School of Our Lorde Participant ask at least 7 of their loved ones or community members to support their participation at the level that they can. Our goal is for each participant to raise between $50-$200 for each unit in financial or other forms of resources. Barter proposals are welcome. You can also contribute a scholarship named after a loved one towards someone else's participation.

Inspiring note. Ida B. Wells was able to publish her groundbreaking pamphlets exposing the violence of racist mob violence including lynching and rape in the United States because "Negro Women's Social Clubs" understood the value of her work and raised the money to support it.*

Intended Donation:

Please name at least seven people who your participation is dedicated to, whether or not you ask them to donate to the cause!
